

NJLS announces 2019 courier price increase: 5.25%

Effective January 1, 2019, NJLS, New Jersey's award-winning courier, will raise its per-package delivery prices by an average 5.25%, though some customers can actually lower their per-package cost by increasing their monthly volume of deliveries.

NJLS's price increase is lower than that announced by both FedEx and USPS for comparable deliveries and NJLS continues to offer up to 50% savings versus global competitors. NJLS's fuel surcharge continues to be significantly lower than both local and global competition.

Bob Pladek, President of NJLS, notes unlike FedEx, NJLS has no charge for residential delivery and far less for heavier items. "We try to offer more within the basic delivery charge, including offering free daily pickup and a signature-required fee costing 50% less than our competition. This, while providing live, local customer service."
